Stormy Session Predicted As Labor Conclave Opens

STATE HEAD IN WELCOME TO LEADERS

Lot of Good Healthy Fighting and Constructive Results Are Expected

Efforts Made to Compose Difficulties in Seating Workers' Delegates

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The American Federation of Labor went into its annual convention today with President Roosevelt's appeal for a labor truce and with predictions of a "lot of good healthy fighting and plenty of constructive results" dominating the scene.

The president's "fireside talk" to the nation was greeted as "pertinent" by President William Green of the federation while other leaders commended it. They professed to regard it as directed chiefly at employers.

Edward A. Vandeleur, president of the California State Federation of Labor, extending the official welcome to the convention, recognized the militant spirit of the meeting.

"I anticipate a lot of good, healthy fireworks," he said, "and I also think much sound legislation will be enacted."

"Industry now realizes that employees must be organized and organized responsibly." Today's session was devoted chiefly to presentation of credentials and routine work of organization. Numerous conferences and committee meetings were held. Much attention was devoted to the efforts to compose difficulties growing out of the refusal of the building trades department to seat delegates from the Carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers. Although President Green demanded these delegates be seated, their credentials were rejected. No results thus far have come from the efforts to bring peace in the situation.

Representatives of the so-called "rank and file" movement in the federation, a movement which is regarded as representing the left wing or at least the "opposition" were active.

DEFENDS MOTHER BY SHOOTING ATTACKER

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Oct. 1.—(UP)—A youth's defense of his mother brought him to a county jail today and left his mother's alleged tormentor fighting for his life in a hospital here.

Police said Albert E. Burgess, 26, admitted shooting J. F. Sherman, 34, because the latter was beating Mrs. Lillian Burgess, the youth's 45-year-old mother. "I shot him and I'd do it again," Burgess was quoted as saying.

The bullet fired by Burgess entered Sherman's right lung and he is in serious condition. "I had it coming," Sherman said after he was removed to the hospital from the Burgess home where he resided.

CARY GRANT, BRIDE PART OVER QUARREL

Grant admitted that his wife went home to her mother but expressed the utmost confidence "everything would be fixed up."

64 PASSENGERS SAVED AS SHIP STRIKES ROCK

Captain and Crew Still on Vessel Today With Engine Room Flooded

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Oct. 1.—(UP)—The 64 passengers of the coastal steamer New Bedford were unanimous in praise today of the efficiency of Captain J. F. Negus and his crew of 27 when the ship struck a submerged object and began filling last night.

The vessel, meanwhile, lay beached off Uncatena Point, a few miles from here, its engine room and rear compartments flooded. The captain and crew were still aboard.

The New Bedford was enroute from New Bedford to Woods Hole when it hit the unseen obstruction. A gaping hole was torn in its port side and the water swirled into the engine room.

Captain Negus immediately ordered an S. O. S. at the same time heading for shore. Motor-driven lifeboats put out from the Woods Hole coast guard station. Private pleasure craft, fishing boats and coast guard cutters and patrol boats headed for the rescue. Although the water was waist deep the engine room crew stuck by their posts until the vessel was beached. On deck, officers and other members of the crew circulated among the passengers, calming them and issuing life preservers.

Soon after the ship was put aground, the coast guard power boats arrived and began taking passengers off. Survivors said there was 12 feet of water in the holds when they abandoned the ship.

The New Bedford's call for help was the third distress appeal received from ships off the Atlantic coast yesterday. Earlier, the Arnold Bernstein liner Koenigstein, with about 135 passengers and 145 crew, wireless that a fire was burning in her hold. Later the ship reported the fire extinguished and the rescuers were called off.

The other appeal came from the Red D. line freighter Falcon, which lost a propeller about 650 miles off the Florida coast and was drifting helplessly. The vessel advised it was not in immediate danger. She awaited the arrival of a salvage tug and a sister ship, the Carabobo.

CCC CAMP MEMBERS KILLED

RED BLUFF, Cal., Oct. 1.—(UP)—Two members of the Deer Creek CCC camp were killed instantly last night when their automobile left the highway 45 miles east of Red Bluff and overturned.

The dead were Ray O. Lewis, 37, commissary clerk, of 114 Florence street, San Francisco, and Raymond Roy Evans, an enrollee, whose home was listed as 3815 East 9th street, Long Beach.

The accident occurred on the Red Bluff-Susannah highway near Mineral shortly before midnight. Investigating officers expressed belief the driver had fallen asleep.

Labor Backs Roosevelt's Peace Plan

Wall Street, However, Disappointed in President's Address

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—President Roosevelt's fireside chat proposal for a trial strike truce in American industry today brought quick endorsement from organized labor.

But Wall Street was disappointed in the speech as a whole and big business may not find in it the message of confidence it desires.

Mr. Roosevelt pledged a fair private profit system and promised that the New Deal would move forward to a permanent basis. He scoffed at his administration critics and said the administration would not be frightened by reactionary lawyers or political editors.

President William A. Green of the American Federation of Labor saw in Mr. Roosevelt's speech assurance that the right of collective bargaining would be maintained for workers. In San Francisco where the A. F. of L. meets today in annual convention he called the strike proposal "pertinent, timely and appropriate."

Textile union leaders here who led labor in the country's largest New Deal battle interpreted the speech as a direct criticism of those who refuse to utilize to the limit all government facilities for peaceful adjustment of labor disputes.

Strike Truce The President told the country last night he would summon to the White House this month the real representatives of large employers of labor and of large groups of organized workers. The objective is:

"To seek their cooperation in establishing what I may describe as a specific trial period of industrial peace."

Wall Street called the strike proposal a favorable development in administration policy. But the financiers remarked the absence in Mr. Roosevelt's speech of any assurance that the budget would be balanced or that monetary experimentation would cease.

Some bankers challenged Mr. Roosevelt's statement that business profits were raised to a sustained level. And there was a question that capital was more secure now than before. The financial judgment appeared to be that the uncertain status of the dollar combined with the danger of further inflation made investing at this time more hazardous than at any period in the recent past.

The strike truce proposal "to civilize our industrial civilization" comes as organized labor moves

SAFEGUARDING OF DEMOCRACY OF WORLD UP TO U. S., FRANCE AND ENGLAND, SAYS DOUMERGUE

(World Copyright 1934, by United Press)
PARIS, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Premier Gaston Doumergue of France, in an exclusive interview today with the United Press, declared that the safeguarding of world democracy is in the hands of three nations—the United States, Great Britain and France.

Himself engaged in a fight to preserve the last of the great strongholds of European democracy, Doumergue drew a parallel between his own efforts and those of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Like Mr. Roosevelt, France's good-humored political peacemaker is moving to concentrate greater executive strength in the hands of the chief of the government. If there is any divergence in the parallel, it is on the currency question.

Taking a definite stand as an advocate of sound gold money, and against inflation and artificial tampering with currencies, and pointing to his opposition to similarity of efforts by the French and American governments to find a way out of the world crisis without sacrificing the principles of democracy which were born of their two revolutions.

GOVERNMENT IN EXTORTION PLEA TO DROP OF HAUPTMANN RECOVERY TEST TO BE DELAYED

Moves to Dismiss Appeal in First Test Case of Crude Oil Control

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Solicitor General J. Crawford Biggs today moved in supreme court to dismiss the government's appeal from an adverse decision in the federal district court of Texas in the first of several test cases challenging the validity of crude oil production control.

Biggs' action makes certain dropping of the one case inasmuch as the government lost in the lower court and must be the party to appeal.

The supreme court last spring took jurisdiction in the case and set argument at once. The government later postponed hearings until fall. The case was to have been argued next week and furnish the first supreme court test of the administration's recovery policies.

Today's motion will not take the question out of the court's hands, however, as it is raised in two other cases involving the validity of the National Recovery Act provisions relating to petroleum production and orders of Secretary of Interior Harold I. Ickes under the petroleum code.

The government was victorious in both these cases in the fifth circuit court of appeals in suits brought by the Panama Refining company and the Amazon Petroleum company.

In both cases the companies have appealed and the government has consented to meet the issue in court.

The court immediately granted Biggs' request today.

The action was considered a strategic move on the part of the government, as in two remaining oil cases the government has the support of the lower court for its position.

Bender's car was overturned, and the Macauley machine careened into a tree, both cars being demolished. Mrs. Macauley's son, Gordon Macauley, aged 24, who was driving the car, received two broken ribs, but was able to be returned to his home last night.

Gordon was made an orphan by the death of his mother, his father having been killed in an automobile accident a year ago, according to his story to the police.

PADRE OF GLACIERS REPORTS DISCOVERY

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., "Padre of the Glaciers," has found a crater at Hehli-famed Pinnacles larger than the famed Aniakchak, scene of his previous explorations. The explorer-priest, professor of geology at Santa Clara university, arrived here after completing his fourth summer of explorations in the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes.

He said the new crater was in an unmaped region. He and his party also found a good-previous uncharted harbor at Bagofot and reported it to the coast guard at Unalakleet in the Aleutian group.

Father Hubbard made glacier studies around Yukutat Bay and checked previous findings in the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes. Next year he plans to explore and photograph southeastern Alaska and winter at King Island in Bering Strait.

HUGH JOHNSON SAYS GOODBYE: "ROBBY" QUILTS

General Pleads With 2000 Workers to Stay With and Complete Job

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—With tears in his eyes, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson today said farewell to the NRA.

The ordinarily hard-boiled general in a speech urged his employees to stay with NRA and said his resignation had been a foregone conclusion and seriously urged by him since May.

The former cavalry leader told 2,000 workers he had reached "the saddest and happiest moment" of his life. He said he was sad because of the end of his NRA job, but happy because it was "a job well done" and he was free for the first time in 16 months from his trials and tribulations.

Miss Frances Robinson, his executive assistant, resigned today. She always appeared with Gen. Johnson on the platform at every public meeting but not today. She will remain at NRA with Johnson until October 15.

Quoting freely from the classics and the Bible, then reverting to war time language, Gen. Johnson gave a colorful farewell greeted by rising ovations which lasted 10 minutes.

Johnson Gries Before it was over he cried and his audience cried.

At the end he said "there remained only to say 'goodbye.' At this point he wept and ended simply, 'God bless you.'"

He thanked the NRA workers repeatedly for their "loving, heartfelt devotion" and for their part in the great work of codifying American industry.

Johnson said their work was such as legislators and courts had

SECURITY BUSINESS CONTROL IN EFFECT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Supervision of America's vast security business passed quickly into the hands of the federal government today as the securities exchange act of 1934, designed to give new protection to investors, became fully effective.

The transition to federal control scarcely affected the orderly business between the nation's stock brokers and millions of investors and traders because of steps taken by the government's control body, the securities and exchange commission, to make the change as "painless" as possible.

The country's 37 securities exchanges were to open as usual today with all except a handful of their securities still available for trading. "Over-the-counter" trading among brokers in unlisted securities also were to continue.

Accuses Critics of Coming Out of Storm Cellar and Forgetting Storm

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—President Roosevelt today reassured the nation concerning the permanency of the New Deal, pledged a fair profit system for business, and proposed a truce to end the bickering of capital and labor.

In the most important of his famous messages to the people

The complete text of President Roosevelt's fireside address to the nation last night will be found on page 4 of today's edition of The Register.

since the banking collapse of last year, he forecast a future prosperity solidly built upon a sound foundation.

Admitting frankly that there may have been some imperfections in his battle against the depression, he pledged himself to lead the country under a banner of liberty to greater freedom and greater security for the average man.

He accused his critics of coming out of their storm cellars and forgetting that there ever had been a storm, gave his word that the administration would redouble its efforts to find jobs for the jobless, and compared this country's recovery program to that of Great Britain.

Ignores Demands The president ignored demands that he forego a make no more governmental experiments. He insisted instead what may become one of the most far-reaching experiments of all—the end of strike, strikes and lockouts through a three-way contract between himself, industry and labor.

In making this unprecedented proposal from the White House last night, the president said he would confer this month with labor leaders and industrialists, seeking their cooperation in establishing a specific trial period for industrial peace.

His announcement, coinciding significantly with the American Federation of Labor convention in San Francisco, said that Mr. Roosevelt would seek:

"Assurances of the making and maintenance of agreements, which can be mutually relied upon, under which wages, hours and working conditions may be determined and any later adjustments shall be made either by agreement, or in case of disagreement, through the mediation of state or federal agencies."

The president said he would not ask either side to lay aside permanently the weapons common he has carried his fight directly to the French people. No single French leader since the days of Bonaparte has had greater support from the French peasantry. They trust him when he declares he had no desire for personal power, but merely wants the supreme governmental power concentrated in the hands of the prime minister.

M. Doumergue asks that he be given power to dissolve the parliament whenever such action becomes necessary to check political intrigue; to place in the hands of the government alone, and to remove from the hands of the parliament, the right to propose taxation and expenditure; to curb the expenditures of the parliament by forcing a continuation of the previous year's budget if parliamentary haggling prevents taking a vote at the proper time.

Outlines Points

In terse phrases, he outlined the fundamental points of resemblance in the situations of France and the United States.

"We are both great democratic countries," he declared. "Together with Great Britain we stand as the last bulwarks for democracy throughout the world. France never has faltered in her belief in the complete loyalty of American popular opinion to the democratic system."

"Democracy is the greatest luxury the people can afford. Today democracy faces its greatest test. In France, as in America, our forefathers made the greatest sacrifices to obtain it. The least we can do is to struggle unceasingly, and without stint, to protect that system under which the people have the greatest degree of self expression and happiness."

"You in America," he continued, "having discovered that to make democracy effective and efficient, you must grant to the chief executive—who always is fundamentally under the final control of the people—certain great and expanding powers."

"All that my program involves in a broad way is to bring into

WILL ROGERS says:

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(To the Editor of The Register:) The greatest aid that I know of that any man could give the world today would be a correct definition of "liberty."

Everybody is running around in a circle announcing that somebody's pinched their "liberty."

Now what might be one class's "liberty" might be another class's "poison." Course I guess absolute "liberty" couldn't mean anything but that anybody can do anything they want to anytime they want to. Well, any half-wit can tell that wouldn't work. So the question arises "how much liberty can I get and get away with it?" Well, you can get no more than you give. That's my definition, but you got perfect "liberty" to work out your own, so get in. And let's get this "liberty" business settled.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

the French political system those elements which give the chief executive strength; that have been the strongest and most admirable features of the democratic systems of government in the United States and Great Britain.

Hope of Peace

"To a degree scarcely appreciated, the hope of peace on the continent of Europe depends upon the preservation of democracy. France today is fighting to preserve the vestiges of that democracy. If France falls in that struggle, the rights and liberties of the individual and all advances in human freedom and culture that have been gained in the last century of unremitting struggle by the French people will have been lost."

"In this struggle to preserve the democratic system, I envisage as well a battle to preserve intact the stability of the gold franc."

"Just as France has the grave responsibility on her shoulders of the preservation of the democratic political system in Europe, so she has also her duty to the whole world of protecting the gold standard. The French franc today stands as the cornerstone of currency stability throughout the world. It is the chart by which most nations now are scaled."

"If France should cut herself adrift from safe and sound anchorage on the gold basis, and underwent another 'revaluation' by leaving that standard, a chaos would exist in world currency. By determining to remain for all time on the gold basis, France not only is protecting her own currency, for her own people, but she is preserving the savings of the world for those nations which already have cut their currencies loose from gold."

M. Doumergue recalled that the hoarded fortunes of the French peasants, whose meagre life savings, on which they hope to live in their declining years, are all in bonds or banknotes, and he painted a tragic picture of what would happen if the French franc, for a second time in eight years, were permitted to seek a new and lower level, off the gold standard.

"It would mean the ruin of France," he said. "It would ruin thousands of holders of government bonds, depriving the people of their life-time savings, destroying their confidence and faith in their government. And those things I will never do."

TWO KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT OVER WEEKEND

Bender was reported to have ignored a boulevard stop sign and to have driven onto the Stanton boulevard directly into the path of the Macauley machine. The county ambulance was called and started with Mrs. Macauley for the Buena park hospital but she was pronounced dead upon arrival.

Many Hurt in Wrecks.
Curtis Orin Parris, 29, of 1314 South Birch street, Santa Ana, was in the county hospital today suffering from a fractured skull, and George Brewer of 109 South Berendo street, Los Angeles, was under observation for possible injuries, as a result of an accident on 101 Highway in front of the county hospital Saturday afternoon. Parris was reported to have parked his car at the side of the 56-foot boulevard and had raised his hood to make some repairs to the motor, when the car was struck from the rear by Brewer's machine. The Parris car caught fire and burned after the crash. Mrs. Parris escaping from the machine unhurt.

to industrial warfare, but that:

"I shall ask those groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization."

Mr. Roosevelt's address was couched in simple phrase, it bristled with contempt for do-nothing critics, promised a continued fight on the part of the chief executive for a more abundant life for Americans and centered upon this note of optimism: "I am happy to report that after years of certainty, culminating in the collapse of the spring of 1933, we are bringing order out of the old chaos with a greater certainty of the employment of labor at a reasonable wage and of more business at a fair profit. These governmental and industrial developments hold promise of new achievements for the nation."

President Roosevelt promised inferentially that the New Deal agencies would continue to operate for the betterment of American civilization.

"Men may differ as to the particular form of governmental activity with respect to industry and business," he said, "but nearly all are agreed that private enterprise in times such as these cannot be left without assistance and without reasonable safeguards lest it destroy not only itself but also our processes of civilization."

Saves Banks

He said that his first great task after March, 1933, was to save the country's banking system. This was done, he said, and then the New Deal's efforts were directed to helping railroads, insurance companies and finally home owners and industry itself.

"In all of these efforts the government has come to the assistance of business and with the full expectation that the money used to assist these enterprises will eventually be repaid," he said. "I believe it will."

The second step to restore normal business, he continued, was to clean up thoroughly unwholesome conditions in the field of investment. In that connection he observed:

"Only a small minority of the people of this country believe in gambling as a substitute for the old philosophy of Benjamin Franklin that the way to wealth is through work."

The president discussed the problems of the National Recovery administration, told how it was to be reorganized and paid tribute to the able and energetic leadership of General Hugh S. Johnson, recently resigned as recovery administrator.

He admitted that the heavy industries had not progressed as rapidly as general business, but said there was no magic formula nor economic panacea which could revive them overnight. "Nevertheless the gains of trade and industry, as a whole, have been substantial," he said.

Driving Power

"We count, in the future as in the past, on the driving power of individual initiative and the incentive of fair private profit, strengthened with the acceptance of those obligations to the public interest which rest upon us all," he added. "We have the right to expect that this driving power will be given patriotically and wholeheartedly to our nation."

It is time now, he said, to review the works of the NRA to determine whether its emergency decisions "have been best calculated to promote industrial recovery and a permanent improvement of business and labor conditions."

Mr. Roosevelt defended heatedly the expenditures of the public works administration in putting men back to work.

"To those who say that our expenditures for public works and other means for recovery are a waste that we cannot afford, I answer that no country, however rich, can afford the waste of its human resources," he said. Demoralization caused by unemployment is our greatest extravagance. "Morally it is the greatest menace to our social order. Some people try to tell me that we must make up our minds that for the future we shall permanently have millions of unemployed, just as other countries have had them for a decade. What may be necessary for those countries is not my responsibility to determine."

"But as for this country, I stand or fall by my refusal to accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed. . . . I do not want to think that it is the destiny of any American to remain permanently on the relief rolls."

Miss Gloria Kaffman of Santa Ana was reported injured Sunday afternoon when the car in which she was riding with A. L. Lawrence of 719 West Fourth street was struck by a car driven by Joe Venegas, 26, of La Jolla, who was arrested on a drunk driving charge. The accident happened at Third and Garnsey.

No one was hurt when cars driven by Pedro Luera, 40, of Costa Mesa, and Edward J. Holloway, 22, of Los Angeles were in collision as Luera attempted to turn in front of his place of business on Newport Road, Costa Mesa.

The president said it was fortunate that "those who are frightened by boldness and cowed by the necessity for making decisions," are few in number.

Accuses Critics

"Now that these people are coming out of their storm cellars, they forget that there ever was a storm," he said. "They point to England. They would have you believe that England has made progress out of her depression by a do-nothing policy, by letting nature take her course."

He said he did not believe anyone could accuse England of "undue orthodoxy" in the present emergency and listed the many recovery moves made by the British government.

"It is perhaps not strange that the conservative British press has told us with pardonable irony that much of our New Deal program is only an attempt to catch up with English reform that go back 10 years or more," he commented.

The president concluded his address with an ironical observation of his own, saying that he was not favorable to a "return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few."

"I prefer," he said, "and I am sure that you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of this nation."

Mr. Roosevelt's definition of liberty was interpreted generally as being a direct reply to former President Hoover, whose book, "The Challenge to Liberty," charged the New Deal with regimenting American life.

WARM SPELL TO CONTINUE SAYS WEATHER MAN

Thousands flocked to Southern California beaches yesterday as inland temperatures reached the high nineties. Scenes along the Orange county ocean front were reminiscent of midsummer as throngs sought the cooling breezes of the sea.

Mercury in the First National bank thermometer in Santa Ana soared to 97 degrees at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The high mark of 95 Saturday was at the same hour. The temperature had reached 94 at 11 a. m. today.

At Newport Beach approximately 20,000 jammed the beaches as temperatures ranged from a minimum of 60 degrees at 8 a. m. to a maximum of 80 yesterday afternoon, with the water temperature hovering around 65.

Thousands flocked to West Newport where the sea, having ravaged the coast for two weeks, was in a beneficent mood, washing back eroded beach. Many yards of the damaged beach had been replaced this morning as the cross action of the tides shifted.

Laguna Beach enjoyed summer weather and crowds yesterday, with the mercury going to 82 in the afternoon. Thousands swam and basked on the sands as lifeguards reported the largest turnout for weeks. Lifeguards at northern beaches reported exceptionally large crowds for this time of year, as Los Angeles thermometers registered 92 degrees as peak.

The weather man could forecast little relief from the unseasonable heat today, with the report reading "fair and continued warm."

REUTER FUNERAL SET FOR TUESDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Nancy Alice Reuter, who came to Santa Ana at the age of 18, 47 years ago and who died at her home in Hollywood Friday night, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from the church of the Messiah, Episcopal, Seventh and Bush streets, Santa Ana.

She was born in Lancashire, England, the daughter of William and Mary Balshaw. She was the widow of August Reuter, an early day pioneer of this section, and mother of Elsa Reuter, a teacher in the Belvedere Junior High school, Los Angeles. She was the aunt of Herman Reuter, former Santa Ana newspaperman; Theodore Reuter, of Santa Ana; Mrs. R. W. Angle, of Santa Ana, and E. A. Reuter, also of this city.

During her residence in Santa Ana she was an active member of the Church of the Messiah and it is believed that she was the last surviving member of the church who was present at the first service of the church. For the past seven years she had made her home in Hollywood.

Palbearers for the service tomorrow will be Jack Taylor sr., Charles Wollaston, William Wollaston, James Oddie, who lives in Los Angeles, Theodore Reuter and Ernest Reuter.

Testimony Heard In Damage Suit Against Laguna

Trial of a $4500 damage suit brought by L. V. Clark, of Laguna Beach, against the City of Laguna Beach, based upon a street project which cut the street grade in front of Clark's property, leaving a 5-foot embankment before his door, got under way today before Superior Judge G. K. Scovel.

J. Perry Bacon, real estate man of Hollywood and Beverly Hills, was the first witness called by Clark to show that the value of his property had been damaged by the street work. Bacon testified that the best use of the property prior to the street work last March was for business purposes. He was expected later to give his views on the damage sustained.

City Attorney Milburn G. Harvey, of Laguna Beach, cross-examined Bacon sharply regarding his source of knowledge regarding the Clark property, and forced the admission that the witness was not familiar with the property prior to the change.

The government grant allowing the setting up of the dairy allows for 1000 families, making about 4000 persons who will receive milk through the project, which will be in charge of J. P. Ward. Fifty per cent of the milk produced will be distributed to members of the cooperative affiliated with the United Cooperative Exchange, while the other 50 per cent will be sold to various governmental relief organizations to provide revolving funds for the continued operation of the dairy.

SAVE JAPANESE ADRIFF IN SEA FOR 4 1-2 HOURS

Y. Ishida, 49, Japanese rancher living a short distance south of Corona Del Mar, owed his life today to a five-gallon oil can which enabled him to remain afloat for four and one-half hours in the water, and the willingness of county and Newport Beach officers to charter the searchlight-equipped "Magic Isle" to search for him after dark last night.

Ishida was reported to have gone ashore hunting yesterday afternoon on the rocks below the bluff where he and other Japanese are operating a truck garden. For some reason, which no one today seemed to be able to explain, he always took with him an empty five-gallon oil can.

No one appeared to know what happened, but at 5:45 a telephone call to the Newport Beach police reported that Ishida was adrift at sea, clinging to the can for support. His shouts for help had attracted the attention of his farming associates.

Chief of Police R. R. Hodgkinson of Newport Beach, accompanied by Life Guard Myron Layman attempted a rescue trip in a small speed boat, but were forced back by darkness and a choppy sea.

Deputy Sheriff John Ryan was called, and Ryan, Hodgkinson, Layman and three Japanese boarded the larger boat, the "Magic Isle" with a powerful searchlight, for the rescue trip. The entire coastline near the scene of Ishida's disappearance was searched without result, and the searchers had almost given up the hunt, when Layman undertook a more intensive search in the rowboat carried by the "Magic Isle."

Finally, Layman had a weak cry at sea, and with the aid of the searchlight succeeded in finding Oshida, still clinging to the five-gallon oil can, probably a half mile off shore and south of the spot from which he was washed to sea.

In his anxiety to be rescued, Ishida left his can and started swimming toward Layman's boat, but quit exhausted after a few strokes and was floating, utterly exhausted, with his face under water when Layman dragged him into the boat.

Numb with cold, Ishida was transferred to the larger boat, and rubbed briskly to restore circulation, while all members of the rescue party wrapped him in their coats to keep him warm until their arrival at Newport Beach, where he was taken to the hospital for first aid and then sent home.

The rescue was effected at 8:10 last night, after Ishida had been drifting in the ocean for four and one-half hours.

Lehman, whose persistence in the search by rowboat resulted in the rescue of Ishida, constituted the crew on Hook Beardslee's star boat, "By-C," which won the international star boat regatta last week in San Francisco.

Sinclair Views To Be Discussed

Rogers of Anaheim will speak at the Civic Auditorium at Huntington Beach Tuesday evening at 7:30, when he will discuss whether Upton Sinclair is a constructionist in line with Christian principles. Townsend Club Meets Tuesday
A meeting of Santa Ana Unit No. 1, Townsend Old Age Revolving Pension clubs, will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Roosevelt school, it was announced today by H. E. Diehl, organizer.

Twenty members of the unit already have been signed up, Diehl said, and it is expected that 100 will be signed up in the near future. The meeting tomorrow is for the purpose of continuing organization activities.

HERD OF MILK COWS EXPECTED TO ARRIVE SOON FOR USE OF DAIRY UNIT OF COOPERATIVES

One of the most enterprising projects to be launched by co-operative self-help organizations in Orange county will be definitely set up within the next two to four weeks when a herd of 90 cows is received by the United Co-operative Exchange to form the nucleus for a large dairy project which is expected to be self-supporting and which is to furnish milk for about 4000 persons who are connected with the 14 units of the county-wide co-operative organization.

Ed P. Mitchell, manager of the warehouse, located at New Westminister at Seventeenth and Huntington Beach boulevard, Saturday received definite word from officials of the state SERRA, division of self-help and barter, that the herd of 90 cows was to be shipped to the cooperatives from Nebraska, to aid them in their program of helping themselves.

It is planned to lease property on which to locate the dairy, which will be equipped with a pasteurizing plant. It is not planned to make other dairy products at the present time, but a continual expansion of the plant is planned until all sorts of dairy products are made.

The government grant allowing the setting up of the dairy allows for 1000 families, making about 4000 persons who will receive milk through the project, which will be in charge of J. P. Ward. Fifty per cent of the milk produced will be distributed to members of the cooperative affiliated with the United Cooperative Exchange, while the other 50 per cent will be sold to various governmental relief organizations to provide revolving funds for the continued operation of the dairy.

LABOR BACKS ROOSEVELT'S STRIKE TRUCE

into a campaign for a 30-hour industrial work week. Although Mr. Roosevelt feels that strikes in the recent months have not been of record breaking proportions, there is on record the judgment of General Hugh S. Johnson, resigning NRA administrator, that the country is menaced with the worst strike epidemic in its history.

Labor To Support
An industrial truce would go far next winter in checking mandatory 30-hour week legislation such as powerful congressional figures contemplate. The truce plan may be the first development administration strategy to check the congressional labor bloc.

If that proves to be true, industry may be expected to support the truce plan as the best defense against so-called radical legislation.

Francis J. Gorman, textile strike committee chief, in accepting the strike truce plan said acceptance was conditioned only "upon our right to organize freely."

Gorman said he considered the president's speech "a cutting rebuke" to employers in the textile industry "who thought they could break our union by resort to conflict."

"It must be clear that the administration is determined that labor's right to organize and bargain collectively shall be fully recognized on that basis," Gorman said, "and with proper machinery available as it now is in our industry a truce is the only sensible proposition."

Gorman said that while "several hundred" cases of alleged discrimination against union strikers by mill owners would be turned over to the textile board tomorrow he believed the president's speech put the management in a position "in which it will be extremely difficult for them to maintain their practice of discrimination."

SMELTZER
SMELTZER, Oct. 1. Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Pyle and Mr. and Mrs. James Heaston, of Huntington Beach, who have been on a hunting trip to Mariposa county, have returned.

Attending the tri-county fair from here were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Murdy Jr. and children. Mr. and Mrs. E. Sekirka and friends from Santa Ana visited Wednesday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Grane.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Grane were Sunday guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Stanley, of Anaheim, at a birthday dinner and theater party in Los Angeles.

CAR THIEVES FLEE
ORANGE, Oct. 1.—The arrival of Officer James Johnson at the parking lot near the Orange theater Friday night prevented the theft of two cars, according to a report at the police station. Two men were pushing one of the cars from the lot and had the other ready to drive away from the curb. On seeing the officer approaching, they fled.

WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE MEET IS SUCCESSFUL

Officers of the Santa Ana League of Women Voters today were planning to stage more public conferences on citizenship and governmental matters following a successful meeting in the Y. M. C. A. when they heard talks by four prominent speakers, Mrs. George B. Mangold, Fross W. Alexander, Harry R. Champlin, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. J. L. Crisswell, of Pasadena.

Mrs. Mangold, national head of the department of government and child welfare of the League of Women Voters, was the first speaker. She was introduced by M. B. Robertson, local chairman of that department. The speaker discussed mainly the child labor laws which 20 states already have ratified, prohibiting child labor. California, she said, was among the first to vote against child labor.

"The National League," Mrs. Mangold said, "is organized to promote the responsibility of participation of women in government. It believes that a continuing political education is essential to the success of a democracy; that citizens may have opinions based on fact, and may, as voters, make their opinions effective."

League Bills
Mrs. Crisswell, who was introduced by Mrs. E. C. Wilson, talked on government and its operation. She told of some of the bills which the League had worked on, including the Lame Duck, Sheppard-Towner, arms embargo, Senator Hiram Johnson's amendment to the arms embargo which carried, making it a national law. She also stressed the need for study of taxation.

Mrs. Harry R. Champlin, vice president of the state league, spoke on plans for the state convention to be held in Oakland October 3, 10 and 11, which will be attended by representatives from all parts of the state. Mrs. J. D. Campbell introduced her.

Mrs. Fross W. Alexander, who last year was chairman of the day at the Mills Alumni International relations council at Riverside, was introduced by Ora K. Heine, president of the local league. The speaker discussed government and international relations, declaring that the main study in the department this year will be the American manufacturing and control of arms and munitions.

Munitions Scandals
Commenting on the deplorable situation which has existed in regard to manufacture of arms and munitions, the speaker called attention to the testimony offered at a recent hearing that the American company allowed its patents to pass by way of Austria to Germany which used them to build 300 U-boats which were used against American lives and boats during the World War. The American company later collecting royalties.

"Secretary of State F. D. and Secretary of Commerce Rogers have attempted to clamor the lid down on the senatorial enquiry being conducted by Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota," she said. "No matter what the evidence reveals as to the nature of the private arms industry, the mounting impression at Washington is that nothing can and nothing will be done about it. Is it a fact that the world is helpless in the grip of this international traffic in armaments?"

Mrs. Harwood Sharp read an original poem on the utility of war. Mrs. Dolores A. Goodwin, Alta Cook and Beulah Rule served the appetizing luncheon and ices at tables attractively decorated with seasonal flowers.

According to Harry E. Gearheart, campaign manager and treasurer of the Orange County Democratic central committee, these two speakers have been heard by large crowds in several California cities and are rated as first class speakers.

DEMOCRATS WILL MEET TOMORROW
A large crowd is expected to attend a Democratic meeting tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock at the Temple theater. Bush and Third streets. Two prominent speakers are to be heard in behalf of Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for governor of California. Miss Karalyn Pickett, of Long Beach, will be the first speaker. She will speak on the subject: "Sinclair, the Crusader." George Probst, attorney and grain broker of Long Beach, will speak upon Sinclair with the plan, as contained in the Democratic platform, to solve the problem of unemployment and bankruptcy in California.

The heart of the average adult is 5 inches long, 3 1/2 inches broad, and 2 1/2 thick.

Text Of Roosevelt's Talk

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Text of President Roosevelt's "side chat" with the nation last night follows:

Three months have passed since I talked with you shortly after the adjournment of the Congress. Tonight I continue that report, though, because of the shortness of time, I must defer a number of subjects to a later date.

Recently the most notable public questions that have concerned us all have had to do with industry and labor, and with respect to these certain developments have taken place which I consider of importance.

I am happy to report that after years of uncertainty, culminating in the collapse of the spring of 1933, we are bringing order out of the old chaos with a great certainty of the employment of labor at a reasonable wage and of more business at a fair profit. These governmental and industrial developments hold promise of new achievements for the nation.

Man may differ as to the particular form of governmental activity with respect to industry and business, but nearly all are agreed that private enterprise in times such as these cannot be left without assistance and without reasonable safeguards lest it destroy not only itself but also our processes of civilization.

Root Noted

The underlying necessity for such activity is indeed as strong now as it was years ago when Elihu Root said the following very significant words:

"Instead of the give and take of free-individual contracts, the tremendous power of organization has combined great aggregations of capital in enormous industrial establishments working through vast agencies of commerce and employing great masses of men in movements of production and transportation and trade, so great in the mass that each individual concerned in them is quite helpless by himself. The relations between the employer and the employed, between the owners of aggregated capital and the units of organized labor, between the small producer, the small trader, the consumer, and the great transporting and manufacturing and distributing agencies, all present new questions for the solution of which the old reliance upon the free action of individual wills appears quite inadequate. And in many directions, the intervention of that organized control which we call government seems necessary to produce the same results of justice and right conduct of individuals before the new conditions arise."

It was in this spirit this described by Secretary Root that we have approached our task of reviving private enterprise in March, 1933. Our first problem was, of course, the banking situation because, as you know, the banks had collapsed. Some banks could not be saved, but the great majority of them, either through their own resources or with government aid, have been restored to complete public confidence. This has given safety to millions of depositors in these banks.

Closely following this great constructive effort we have, through various Federal agencies, saved debtors and creditors alike in many other fields of enterprise, such as loans on farm mortgages and home mortgages; loans to the railroads and, finally, help for home owners and industry itself.

In all of these efforts the government has come to the assistance of business and with the full expectation that the money used to assist these enterprises eventually will be repaid. I believe it will be.

Investment Clean-up

The second step we have taken in the restoration of normal business enterprise has been to clean up thoroughly unwholesome conditions in the field of investment. In this we have had assistance from many bankers and business men, most of whom recognize the past evils in the banking system, in the sale of securities, in the deliberate encouragement of stock gambling, and in many other ways in which the public lost billions of dollars. They saw that without changes in the policies and methods of investment there could be no recovery of public confidence in the security of savings.

The country now enjoys the safety of bank savings under the new banking laws, the careful checking of new securities under the Securities Act, and the curtailment of bank stock speculation through the Securities Exchange Act.

I sincerely hope that as a result people will be discouraged in unhappy efforts to get rich quick by speculating in securities. The average person almost always loses. Only a small minority of the people of this country believe in gambling as a substitute for the old philosophy of Benjamin Franklin that the way to wealth is through work.

Achievements

In meeting the problems of industrial recovery the chief agency of the government has been the National Recovery Administration.

Under its guidance, trades and industries covering more than 90 per cent of all industrial enterprises have adopted codes of fair competition, which have been approved by the President.

Under these codes, in the industries covered, child labor has been eliminated. The work day and the work week have been shortened. Minimum wages have been established and other wages adjusted toward a rising standard of living.

The emergency purpose of the NRA was to put men to work and since its creation more than 4,000,000 persons have been re-employed, in great part through the co-operation of American business brought about under the codes.

Benefits of the industrial recovery program have come, not only to labor in the form of new jobs, in relief from overwork and in relief from underpay, but also to the owners and managers of industry because, together with a great increase in the pay rolls, there has come a substantial rise in the total of industrial profits—a rise from a deficit figure in the first quarter of 1933 to a level of sustained profits within one year from the inauguration of the NRA.

Task Not Complete

Now it should not be expected that even employed labor and capital would be completely satisfied with present conditions. Employed workers have not by any means all enjoyed a return to the earnings of prosperous times; although millions of hitherto under-employed workers are today far better paid than ever before. Also, billions of dollars of invested capital have today a greater security of present and future earning power than before. This is because of the establishment of fair competitive standards and because of relief from unfair competition in wage cutting which depresses markets and destroys purchasing power.

But it is an undeniable fact that the restoration of other billions of sound investments to a reasonable earning power could not be brought about in one year. There is no magic formula, no economic panacea, which could simply revive overnight the heavy industries and the trades dependent upon them.

Nevertheless, the gains of trade and industry, as a whole, have been substantial.

In these gains and in the policies of the administration there are assurances that hearten all forward-looking men and women with the confidence that we are definitely rebuilding of political and economic systems on the lines laid down by the New Deal—lines which as I have so often made clear, are in complete accord with the underlying principles of orderly popular government which Americans have demanded since the white man first came to these shores.

Hope of Future

We count, in the future as in the past, on the driving power of individual initiative and the incentive of fair private profit, strengthened by the acceptance of those obligations to the public interest which rest upon us all. We have the right to expect that this driving power will be given patriotically and wholeheartedly to our nation.

We have passed through the formative period of code-making in the National Recovery Administration and have effected a reorganization of the NRA into a new organization of the next phase, which is, in turn, a period of preparation for legislation which will determine its permanent form.

In this recent reorganization we have recognized three distinct functions. First, the legislative or policy-making function. Second, the administrative function of code making and revision, and third, the judicial function, which includes enforcement, consumer complaints and the settlement of disputes between employers and employees and between one employer and another.

We are now prepared to move into this second phase, on the basis of our experience in the first phase under the able and energetic leadership of Gen. Johnson.

We shall watch carefully the working of this new machinery for the second phase of the N. R. A., modifying it where it needs modification and finally making recommendations to the Congress, in order that the functions of N. R. A. will have proved their worth may be made a part of the permanent machinery of government.

Let me call your attention to the fact that the National Industrial Recovery Act gave business men the opportunity they had sought for years to improve business conditions through what has been called self-government in industry. If the codes which have been written have been too complicated, if they have gone too far in such matters as price fixing and limitation of production, let it be remembered that so far as possible consistent with the immediate public interest of this past year and the vital necessity of improving labor conditions, the representatives of trade and industry were permitted to write their ideas into the codes.

It is now time to review these actions as a whole to determine through deliberate means in the light of experience, from the standpoint of the good of the industries themselves, as well as the general public interest whether the methods and policies adopted in the emergency have been best calculated to promote industrial recovery and a permanent improvement of business and labor conditions.

There may be a serious question as to the wisdom of many of those devices to control production, or to prevent destructive price cutting which many business organizations have insisted were necessary, or whether their effect may have been to prevent that volume of production which would make possible lower prices and increased employment.

Another question arises as to whether in fixing minimum wages on the basis of an hourly or weekly wage we have reached into the heart of the problem which is to provide such annual earnings for the lowest paid worker as will meet his minimum needs. We also question the wisdom of extending code requirements suited to the great industrial centers and to large employers, to the great number of small employers in the smaller communities.

During the last twelve months our industrial recovery has been to some extent retarded by strikes, including a few of major importance. I would not minimize the inevitable losses to employers and employees and to the general public through such conflicts. But I would point out that the extent and severity of labor disputes during this period has been far less than in any previous, comparable period.

When the business men of the country were demanding the right to organize themselves adequately to promote their legitimate interests; when the farmers were demanding legislation which would give them opportunities and incentives to organize themselves for a common advance, it is natural that the workers should demand and obtain a statutory declaration of their constitutional right to organize themselves for collective bargaining as embodied in Section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Adjustment Methods

Machinery set up by the Federal government has provided some new methods of adjustment. Both employers and employees must share the blame of not using them as fully as they should. The employer who turns away from the agencies of peace, who denies freedom of organization to his employees, or fails to make every reasonable effort at a peaceful solution of their differences, is not fully supporting the recovery effort of his government. The workers who turn away from these same impartial agencies and decline to use their good offices to gain their ends are likewise not fully co-operating with their government.

It is time that we made a clean-cut effort to bring about a new action of management and labor which is one of the high purposes of the recovery act. We have passed through more than a year of education. Step by step we have created all the government agencies necessary to insure, as a general rule, industrial peace, with justice for all those willing to use these agencies whenever their voluntary bargaining fails to produce a necessary agreement.

There should be at least a full and fair trial given to these means of ending industrial warfare; and in such an effort we should be able to secure for employers and employees, and consumers the benefits that all derive from the continuous, peaceful operation of our essential enterprises.

Accordingly, I propose to confer within the coming month with small groups of those truly representative of large employers of labor and of large groups of organized labor, in order to seek their co-operation in establishing what I may describe as a specific trial period of industrial peace.

From those willing to join in establishing this hoped-for period of peace, I shall seek assurances of the making and maintenance of agreements, which can be mutually relied upon, under which wages, hours and working conditions may be determined and any later adjustments shall be made either by agreement, or in case of disagreement, through the mediation or arbitration of State or Federal agencies.

I shall not ask either employers or employees permanently to lay aside the weapons common to industrial war. But I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest, and to experiment for a reasonable period with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization.

Public Works

Closely allied with the NRA is the program of public works provided for in the same act and designed to put more men back to work, both directly on the public works themselves, and indirectly in the industries supplying materials and services for the public works. To those who say that our expenditures for public works and other means for recovery are a waste that we cannot afford, I answer that no country, however rich, can afford the waste of its human resources. Demoralization caused by the vast unemployment is our greatest menace to our social order.

Unemployment Stand

Some people try to tell me that we must make up our minds that for the future we shall permanently have millions of unemployed just as other countries have had them for over a decade. What is necessary for those countries is not my responsibility to determine. But as for this country, I stand or fall by my refusal to accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed. On the contrary, we must make it a national principle that we will not tolerate a large army of unemployed and that we will arrange our national economy to end our present unemployment as soon as we can and then to take wise measures against its return. I do not want to think that it is the destiny of any American to remain permanently on relief rolls.

Points To England

Those, fortunately few in number, who are frightened by boldness and cowed by the necessity for making decisions, complain that all we have done is unceasing and subject to great risks.

Now that these people are coming out of their storm cellars, they forget that there ever was a storm. They point to England. They would have you believe that England has made progress out of her depression by a do-nothing policy, by letting nature take her course.

England has her peculiarities and we have ours but I do not believe any intelligent observer can accuse England of undue orthodoxy in the present emergency.

Did England let nature take her course? No.

Did England hold to the gold standard when her reserves were threatened? No.

Has England gone back to the gold standard today? No.

Did England hesitate to call in $100,000,000 of her war bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, to issue new bonds thereof bearing only 3 1/2 per cent interest, thereby saving the British treasury $150,000,000 a year in interest alone? No. And let it be recorded that the British bankers helped.

Is it not a fact that ever since the year 1909, Great Britain in many ways has advanced further along lines of social security than the United States?

Is it not a fact that relations between capital and labor on the basis of collective bargaining are much further advanced in Great Britain than in the United States? It is perhaps not strange that the conservative British press has told us with pardonable irony that much of our New Deal program is only an attempt to catch up with English reforms that go back ten years or more.

Calm Americans

Nearly all Americans are sensible and calm people. We do not get greatly excited nor is our peace of mind disturbed, whether we be business men or workers or farmers, by awesome pronouncements concerning the unconstitutionality of some of our measures of recovery and relief and reform. We are not frightened by reactionary lawyers or political editors. All of these things have been heard before. More than 20 years ago, when Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson were attempting to correct abuses in our national life, the great Chief Justice White said:

"There is great danger, it seems to me, to arise from the constant habit which prevails where anything is opposed or objected to, of referring without rhyme or reason to the Constitution as a means of preventing its accomplishment, thus creating the general impression that the Constitution is but a barrier to progress instead of being the broad highway through which alone true progress may be enjoyed."

In our efforts for recovery we have avoided on the one hand the theory that business should and must be taken over into an all-embracing government. We have avoided on the other hand the equally untenable theory that it is an interference with liberty to offer reasonable help when private enterprise is in need of help.

The course we have followed fits the American practice of government—a practice of taking action step by step, of regulating only to meet concrete needs—a practice of courageous recognition of change. I believe with Abraham Lincoln that "the legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all or cannot do so well for themselves in their separate and individual capacities."

I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known in the history of America.

MINIMUM PRICE OF MILK ESTABLISHED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The price for class 1 milk to dairy farmers supplying the Los Angeles area was increased today from 67 to 67 cents per pound of butter fat.

The increase was incorporated in amendments to the Los Angeles milk license. An increase in the minimum resale prices for milk below which sales cannot be made without license violation was included.

The new minimum resale prices schedule represents an advance of one-half cent per quart on milk—two cents a quart on 2 1/2 per cent cream and four cents on cream of higher test, while the increase to producers amounts to about 24 cents per 100 pounds of 4 per cent milk.

Public Speaking Course To Open Tomorrow Night

Tuesday evening brings the opening session of the fall term in public speaking at the Y. M. C. A., to be conducted by R. C. Smedley. This will be Smedley's eighth year of teaching public speaking to Santa Ana residents.

During those eight years he has had several hundred different men and women in his classes, and many of the popular speakers of the community today note the beginning of their forensic careers in the work which they took under his instruction.

The course which starts tomorrow evening, according to the plan announced by Smedley, is to carry on for just 10 weeks of intensive work. The plan which he is using this time contemplates certain changes of methods by which he hopes to secure quick and satisfactory results. The general principles of the course will be as formerly, with instruction, practice speaking and constructive criticism as the fundamentals.

The first session is open to all who are interested, and a general invitation is extended to men and women. Enrollments for the course will be taken at the close of the first session.

BIRTH CONTROL IS BACKED BY BISHOP

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—(UP)—Birth control by the "rhythm" method, already approved by prominent Catholic clergymen, was endorsed today by the Rt. Rev. George Craig Stewart, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago.

Bishop Stewart outlined the method and gave his approval in a letter to the clergy, social workers and communicants of the church.

He said he obtained the opinion of scientists over a period of a year before feeling that he could recommend it and added that he finds it "free from medical, esthetic and moral objections against artificial contraception."

The "rhythm" plan is being actively sponsored by a foundation headed by Dr. Leo J. Latz, member of the medical faculty of Loyola University of Chicago. The method is based on adjustment of married life to carefully determined periods of natural sterility.

MISSING AIR LINER FOUND TO BE SAFE

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1.—(UP)—The missing Wedell-Wilhelms Boeing air liner was found today on Last Island, about 65 miles southwest of Grand Island, in the Gulf of Mexico. Pilot Walter Wedell and six passengers were reported safe.

The air liner was discovered by a squadron of planes from the Wedell-Wilhelms airport at Paterson, La. The squadron had been searching for the amphibian since early in July. It disappeared Sunday while enroute from Paterson to Grand Island on a fishing expedition.

Searching parties said Wedell decided to land on Last Island instead of Grand Island, their original destination. The party spent the night fishing and planned to return to Paterson later today.

WEDDING GIVES SERMON THEME AT TABERNACLE

Using the occasion of an impressive church wedding, the Rev. D. F. Myers, pastor of the Four Square Gospel Tabernacle, last night preached to an audience of more than 700 persons, declaring that "the Bible is a love story," and that God often chooses the marriage relationship to illustrate spiritual truths.

His subject, "And He Loved Her," was taken from the text in Rev. 19th chapter and the seventh and eighth verses. He said: "The whole world loves a lover and all nations ring their wedding bells. Marriage is honorable in all throughout the Bible we find many love stories. God chooses beautiful scenes from the midst of human life to illustrate spiritual truths and He often chooses marriage relationship."

"The Bible is a love story. Every Christian belongs to the Bride of the Lamb, and the outstanding event of the future, so far as the church is concerned is the return of Jesus for His Bride and the Marriage supper in the air. Making herself ready is the big business of the Church and likewise the individual Christian for the Bride must meet the expectations of the Bridegroom when he comes."

"The story of Isaac and Rebecca stands out for its sweetness and beauty. A bride was to be sought for Isaac, just as a bride is being sought for Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God. The history of Isaac is 'similar to Jesus. Isaac was the Son of Promise so Jesus was also the Son of Promise. Isaac was offered as a sacrifice so Jesus was offered on Mount Calvary, just as The Servant of Abraham was sent to seek a Bride for Isaac so the Holy Spirit is seeking and calling men and women to follow the Lord Jesus Christ."

"What a day it was when Rebecca and Eleazar met at the well and there she made her decision. So it is at the well of Salvation we make our decisions for Christ. Just as Rebecca came out, so we that profess Jesus Christ to be our Savior must come out from among the world and be separate and walk not in the council of the ungodly. Just as Rebecca went down, so we must go down in prayer and confession and surrender to God."

Establishment of a regular passenger and mail dirigible service across the Atlantic and Pacific was recommended to the federal aviation commission today by Former Senator Hiram Bingham, Republican, Conn. president of the National Aeronautical association.

As the commission resumed its hearings on recommendations to be submitted to the next congress, Bingham urged federal aid for private dirigible operations so that transoceanic service could be inaugurated.

"The airships would be part of our merchant marine," he said. "The government might properly lend its assistance to any company establishing such service."

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

-- News Behind the News --

WASHINGTON
By Paul Mallon
INDUSTRIAL POLICY

No one was quite satisfied with his new directorate which President Roosevelt selected to reorganize the NRA.

The A. F. of L. boys, for instance, gave some mild public applause for the sake of appearances, but, among themselves, they began to worry. The labor representatives in the new directorate are not the A. F. of L. kind—at least, not the William Green kind.

Likewise, the white shirt group of industrialists started murmuring among themselves about the preponderance of Roosevelt liberals in the new set-up. They began to pine for good old General Johnson.

For this reason, most of the impartial insiders here are leaning toward the view that new set-up may be "all right," meaning that they expect it to work toward a middle-of-the-road result.

PERSONALITIES

That "middle of the road" phrase does not have a very specific meaning any more. Too much depends on what radical or conservative camp you are viewing the road from.

You can get a better idea of what to expect from boring into the personalities behind the new set-up. These personalities may be checked as follows:

Clay Williams—a hard-boiled, capable former tobacco manufacturer, whose industry has not accepted an NRA code.

Arthur Whiteside—an intelligent Wall Streeteer, who signed the Chamber of Commerce statement a week ago urging that the NRA be scrapped.

Sidney Hillman—a rough-and-tumble, efficient labor leader, who has the clothing industry under the thumb of his union. His labor tie-up is with the John Lewis crowd in the A. F. of L., not with the Green crowd.

Walton Hamilton—a Yale law professor, formerly an ardent left wing progressive, who has been mellowed somewhat by his studies of constitutional law.

Leon Marshall—a moderate liberal college professor, who has been at Johns Hopkins trying to figure out how to humanize law.

Add those personalities up, and the answer is nothing. This board probably never will be able to agree on where to hold its meetings. It is three liberals, but the third liberal Marshall is an indeterminate, or at least an uncertain, quantity.

GUIDING FORCE

The real secret of the reorganization may be found in the personalities on the second directorate—that is, the policy committee. There will be no disagreement among these policy fixers. They are all of one mind, and the mind there is of Mr. Roosevelt's.

Messrs. Richberg, Ickes, Hopkins, Davis and Miss Perkins know that Mr. Roosevelt wants reform. They will give it to him. In fact, they may give him just a little more reform than he wants, for they are all zealous progressives and liberals, who have an irrepressible hankering to make everything better.

They will tell the first committee what to do. All of them, except Richberg, are too busy with other jobs to worry about details, but all will vote "aye" whenever Richberg calls them in. They will decide all the heavy policies over which the administrative board will split; and they will decide the liberal way.

HELI

New Deal Co-ordinators Walker and Richberg found many conflicting phases inside the New Deal, but they never found one to equal a current insurrection inside the FERA.

Employees there are actually collecting defense fees for a field agent who is being prosecuted by the justice department for fraud.

The case is that of Pierce Williams, FERA agent in California, who was indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the government. The prosecution is being handled by the United States district attorney of Los Angeles.

Mr. Williams has some friends in the FERA here who believe he is being unjustly treated. They say the case involves nothing more than the fact that Williams put men to work on the government payroll and then failed to supply tools.

CALLERS

The word is going around among the elite of Wall Street that Mr. Roosevelt conferred with a lot of people at his Hyde Park hideout and at the yacht races without letting anyone know about it.

The shy Hyde Park visitors are supposed to have included two very prominent Wall Street brokers who were called in on the government bond situation.

The financial sailors whom Mr. Roosevelt is supposed to have seen during the yacht races included Owen Young, Winthrop Aldrich, Newton Baker, Junius Morgan, and others. Maybe they talked about Mae West spinners, but more than likely they also talked about bond and financial sales, with which the artistic fingers of Bernard Baruch now are supposed to be tinkering.

NOTES

Don't laugh, but Hoover's war secretary, Pat Hurley, is a landlord of the New Deal. He rents one of his buildings here to Harry Hopkins' FERA.

The tragedy of General Johnson's experience was written by his best friend here in one sentence: "The general tried to carry capital and labor water on both shoulders and he got all wet because he leaned too much on both sides."

The coming trial of Samuel Insull (opening Tuesday in Chicago) is supposed to have been pushed along by high pressure. It is an idea to get the finance story of 1923 before the people again, what with the elections coming on in a few weeks.

Although Al Smith took the brown derby out of moth balls the other day, Mr. Roosevelt continued to wear a straw hat, days after the season closed. (Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon)

NEW YORK
By JAMES McMULLIN
CONCESSION

Financial circles aren't confining their defenses against the threat of a government central bank to preparing an alternative bank reform plan and a program of "public education."

They're also shooting the works on an inside campaign to convince the administration that a central bank isn't at all necessary—that present credit machinery will carry whatever load Washington sees fit to impose on it. Raymond Moley's contact work in New York has given them a chance to present their case privately, and they've made the most of it.

The bankers' attitude towards Washington has taken a sharp turn in the past few weeks—since they have come to realize that the menace can't be shrugged off.

There's a new atmosphere of "let's get together on this thing. If Uncle Sam needs more cash we'll provide it." The disposition to be critical of federal financing and drive as hard as a bargain with the treasury as possible (as in the case of the 4th Liberty conversion) has evaporated in the face of the emergency. The masters of credit are willing to forget their aversion to an unbalanced budget if they can only retain their fundamental freedom of action.

In effect the banks have virtually promised to lend the government all the short-term money it wants without querying its purpose or haggling over terms.

There's a new atmosphere of "let's get together on this thing. If Uncle Sam needs more cash we'll provide it." The disposition to be critical of federal financing and drive as hard as a bargain with the treasury as possible (as in the case of the 4th Liberty conversion) has evaporated in the face of the emergency. The masters of credit are willing to forget their aversion to an unbalanced budget if they can only retain their fundamental freedom of action.

Insiders say that Mr. Moley has bent a sympathetic ear to their proposition.

SPOKESMAN

Other angles. Loans on other security collateral—business loans—have been rising for eight weeks straight. Commercial paper transactions have been climbing for the past three weeks—the longest consecutive period since '32. Bankers have taken pains to stress the idea that the seeds of credit expansion have at last begun to sprout.

Conservatives are tremendously cheered by Senator Fletcher's announced opposition to the central bank. They were so grateful they didn't even murmur a protest at his simultaneous castigation of the banks for being too tight with credit.

The informed figure it this way. Fletcher's personal opinion isn't important but his job is. As Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee he can do a lot to block—as well as to promote—legislation. Moreover, he's a party wheeler and not at all likely to wander off the reservation on his own. Therefore it's safe to assume he would not have expressed such views unless he had advance assurance that they would not be displeasing to FDR.

Many New Yorkers are even convinced he was acting as unofficial White House spokesman. His criticism of the bankers are taken simply as a warning they would do well to heed.

BETTER

Improvement in the stock market last week—especially in the volume of trading—signified two things: relaxation of the Wall Street opposition to the New Deal and recognition that business is actually on the upgrade. Much of the new buying that came into the market was from sources which insiders call "good." Big shots who have been sitting on the sidelines—either through lack of confidence in the outlook or to obstruct recovery sentiment—got back in the game. Ray Moley and Vincent Astor rate assists on this development too.

Here are four signs which wise observers accept as indicating an authentic upturn.

1. Business statistics reflect better conditions week by week. The figures still don't look so good as against those of a year ago but by this time in '33 the down-trend had already begun. This year the delayed seasonal rise has just begun to operate—so comparisons from now on will be increasingly heartening.

2. It's now apparent that the ravages of the drought were greatly exaggerated. Farmers in unaffected areas are better off than they have been for years. Those whose crops were wrecked are being cared for by the government and have hopeful prospects for '35. The farmers are unbottling their pocketbooks and business is benefitting—especially mail order stores.

3. Retail trade has lately reported tremendous gains west of Cleveland and some signs of life even in the East.

ELVIA WORDEN
BECOMES BRIDE
OF H. JOHNSON

ORANGE, Oct. 1.—Choosing the Immanuel Lutheran church as the setting, Miss Elvia Worden, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Woodell, 303 North Waverly street, was married to Howard Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Johnson, of 357 South Olive street, at 8 o'clock Saturday evening.

The altar was banked with larkspur and greenery. The impressive single ring ceremony was read by the Rev. A. G. Webbeking, pastor of the church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a white satin gown, cut in Princess style and fashioned with a long train. She wore an elbow length lace veil and carried a shower bouquet of white rose buds.

Attending the bride was Miss Pauline Johnson as maid of honor. She wore a yellow crepe frock and carried a bouquet of orchid asters. Bridesmaids were Miss Verna Ray Hardy who was in pink crepe and who carried pink sweet peas, Miss Helen Mollica, wearing blue crepe frock and carrying pink sweet peas, and Miss Bethene Hedrick, wearing orchid crepe frock and carrying yellow sweet peas.

Little Miss Elleen Kietke, was flower girl and she was dressed in fluffy yellow chiffon and carried a basket of rose petals.

Byron McKenny served the bridegroom as best man, while Grover Hardy, Estil Hamill and George Morris were ushers.

Preceding the ceremony E. T. Pingle played a group of appropriate organ solos. Howard Davis sang, "The Lord Is My Shepherd" and Miss Lora Lee McCall gave as a solo, "Thy Perfect Love."

Both were accompanied at the organ by E. T. Pingle, who also played the procession and recessional.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church social hall. Tables were attractively decorated with pastel tints predominating, with the exception of the bride's table which was in white, and was centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

During the reception Howard Davis sang "Oh Promise Me" and Miss Lora Lee McCall sang, "At Dawning." Following a short honeymoon, the young couple will be at home to their many friends at San Bernardino, where Mr. Johnson is employed in the Santa Fe shops.

BASES SERMON ON ANSWER TO FOUR APOSTLES

ORANGE, Oct. 1.—"What shall be the sign of their coming and of the end of the world?" Evangelist B. R. Spear presented the Lord's answer to this question asked by four apostles in his lecture at the Woman's clubhouse last night.

"One of the most singular facts," said Spear, "about the Savior's answer is that he placed his evidence in the sun, moon and stars; objects and locations beyond the reach of man."

The speaker said in part: "Passing from the scenes of Jerusalem's destruction, which took place in A. D. 70, Jesus quickly passed over the long centuries known as the 'Dark Ages.' He briefly mentioned them, 'Then shall be great tribulation—but for the elect sake those days shall be shortened.'" Matt. 24:21, 22.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light. This took place at the time Christ indicated the following 'middle ages' or 'dark ages.' Of May 19, 1780, when for 14 hours no sun, moon or stars shone the great astronomer Herschel wrote, 'The dark day in North America was one of those wonderful phenomena of nature which will always be read with interest, but which philosophy is at a loss to explain.' The Lord gives the secret of it in Ezekiel 32:7, 8.

"Following the dark day Jesus said, 'The stars shall fall from heaven.' November 13, 1833, was the greatest display in all history. R. M. Devens' 'History of Progress' says, 'Never did rain fall much thicker than the meteors fell toward the earth; east, west, north and south. It was the same.' Young's 'Manual of Astronomy' states, 'The sky was as full of them as it ever is of snowflakes in a storm.' Keep in mind that they fell, hundreds of thousands of them, for five or six hours.

"Climaxing this great answer Jesus continued, 'When he shall see all these things, know that he is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled.' Christ has marked our generation as the last; the generation to see him come again."

Spear speaks on the sequel of this lecture tonight, the subject being, "War—Logical Proof From Christ that the World is on the Verge of Armageddon, the World's Last Battle." Commencing tonight an added feature will be the question box in which all may put written questions on the Bible. These will be answered nightly.

'Little Teams' Menace Conference Supremacy

(By United Press) Out of the whirligig of the second Saturday of the season came the somewhat thundering notice that the little schools and

The so-called independents offer definite challenges to the long-held supremacy of conference elites in football matters on the Pacific Coast.

It's early in the season and the big fellows aren't in shape. Nevertheless Santa Clara's feat in fighting Stanford to a 7-7 tie, Little College of Pacific's great battle before bowing 6-0 to U. S. C., and University of San Francisco's 10-0 victory over Oregon State show the way the wind is

St. Mary's, the California opponent in next Saturday's biggest game, rolled up 61 points while holding Columbia of Portland scoreless yesterday. It was Columbia's first shutout in 20 games.

Also on the program for the next week-end are Stanford vs. Oregon State at Portland; Washington State vs. S. C. at Los Angeles; Idaho vs. Gonzaga at Moscow; and on Sunday, Santa Clara and U. S. F. at San Francisco.

These results along with University of Oregon's overwhelming 26-3 win over U. C. L. A. were the surprise the second week-end had to offer. California, University of Washington, Washington State, and St. Mary's won as expected.

dition and stinger reserves appear Stanford. After overpowering the Santa Claras for three periods, the coast conference champions wilted in the heat. However, Smith's boys scored a touchdown and came close to another against a very tired team.

Does Stanford lack capable reserves? It would appear so, for Grayson played all 60 minutes, Moscrip most of them, and when the varsity men went out, the Santa Claras "went to town" with four touchdowns.

The "Mighty Midget" makes its first appearance at the Municipal Bowl here Wednesday night to compete against a field of fast cars and drivers in the American Legion's midget automobile racing program.

The "Mighty Midget" is a 38-cube inch Miller designed racer—being specially built by former engineers of the Harry A. Miller factory for racing on fifth-of-a-mile ovals. "Curly" Gresham, Miller's

U. S. C. failed to take College of Pacific seriously, and Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg, that grand old veteran, turned out a well-coached team that amazed Los Angeles fans with its great defense. Pacific lacked a running attack or a different tale would have been told. Troy's score came on a fuke. A Trojan punt touched a Pacific player on the foot while rolling down the field and an alert Trojan end recovered the ball on the 17-yard line. Warburton entered the game and led Wotkyns across the goal line in one play.

The tears that were shed in Eugene, when Mikulak, Ge and Tem-an midget and long flat track driver, will tool the "little charm" in its first race over the Santa Ana track.

Leo Gueson and Fred Offen-hauser, engineers, predict that this miniature Miller will revolutionize the game which has been drawing big crowds all summer. Copied after the famous 255-cubic inch motors which carried Leon Dursy, Ralph DePalma, Tommy Milton, Jimmy Murphy and a host of other internationally famous pilots to victory over the speedways, the "Midget" is expected to drive the present high speed 4-60 outboard racers from the track.

The Bruins had an favorites. Washington had a hard time getting started against Idaho, but the second half the Huskies asserted themselves and won. Herl Burkin, the wandering Texan, showed sufficient spunk to give Washington what it lacked a lot of times last year—a fast-break.

Washington State did better than expected in defeating Montana, 27-0. The Staters flashed two sophomores—Goddard and Daugherty—who are plenty good.

California, pointing toward its biggest year, gained 927 yards and scored 87 points in a double-

DETROIT, Oct. 1.—A diamond conflagration—flaming with fight, off in this baseball-mad city Wed-

"wonder men" of the St. Louis
Cardinals collide with Micker

This battle will mark the first time in baseball history that a National league champion from St. Louis ever tangled with Detroit, pennant winners of the American league, in a world series.

It should be a classic. Glamour oozes from every angle of this world series picture. Flery Mickey Cochrane versus the erstwhile Fordham flash, Frank Frisch; either of the mighty Deans, "Dizzy" or "Daffy," vs. the Arkansas catapult, "Schoolboy" Rowe, and so on.

As a matter of fact the picture looked far too good to please Cochrane. Mickey had hoped the New York Giants would stagger into Detroit Wednesday, instead of the Red Birds.

Cochrane and his men had regarded this series as a sort of exposition which would reveal to the great automobile center what a beautiful, stream-lined baseball machine it had turned out. But now many of the experts fear that the lads from down Missouri way may steal the show.

Even the most ardent Tiger fans admit the Cards are truly formidable—on fighting edge after smashing through to the National league pennant on the very last day of the season; after winning 20 of their past 25 games; after whittling down the Giants' lead seven full games in three short weeks, and finishing two games ahead of them.

Betting men fear they can not. The Tigers, heavy favorites to beat the Giants, were on the wrong end of the quotations today. The odds were 3 to 5 against the Cards winning the series, and 6 to 5 against the

The series will open Wednesday as scheduled, with the second game Thursday also in Detroit. The caravan will shift to St. Louis for the next three games, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

If two more games are needed to determine the winner, they will be played in Detroit, Monday and Tuesday.

BREA PASTOR IN SERMON ON 'CONSCIENCE'

BREA, Oct. 1.—The Rev. Donald Gaylord, preaching at the Congregational church on Sunday morning spoke on "Conscience," taking his text from I Kings 19:12, "And after the fire a still small voice."

The Rev. Mr. Gaylord said in part: "Conscience is not much in vogue these days. It is considered, perhaps, one of the casualties of modern progress, but as we view our modern world it seems one of its greatest needs is for men and women of stern conscience, of the brand of conscience such as drove Luther, St. Francis, Washington, Lincoln and many other martyrs and heroes to action."

THE UNKNOWN BLOND

David Bannister returns from Hollywood to his former home. He is trying to forget Edith Allen, an actress, who has jilted him.

He is in the dinner with his old friend, Jim Paxton, now editor of the Tremont Post. Later he takes a taxi to the cab. The cab is half ad in front of the Shelby Arms, apartment hotel, by a traffic light.

A girl comes out of the hotel and rushes to the cab. When she sees Bannister she is embarrassed but agrees to ride with him to her destination. In the cab she drops her handbag and Bannister sees that it contains a revolver. A few minutes later she returns.

Next morning Bannister read the Tracy King, orchestra leader in a movie theater, has been found dead in his apartment at the Shelby Arms. Police are looking for an "unknown blond," who visited King the night before.

Bannister, remembering the girl in the cab, is puzzled. Downtown later that morning he meets her again.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.
CHAPTER IV
The girl paused, chin lifted a trifle defiantly. "Well," she takes me to the police. That's what you've come for, isn't it?"

Somehow Bannister couldn't find the words he wanted. "But—" he stammered. "I mean—"

"I'd rather get it over with," the girl assured him. "Right away. What are you waiting for?"

She was dressed exactly as she had been the night before, in the green suit with the bit of fur at the throat and the close-fitting green hat. A little of the bright, honey-colored hair showed below the hat at each side of her face. It gave her an air of innocence, Bannister thought.

Suddenly he was moved to a mistake. He might be making a mistake, but he couldn't help it. "Listen," he said, "you can't stay here! And you shouldn't be wearing those clothes. Don't you know that? You're taking a terrible risk—"

The defiance dropped from the girl's face. She stared at him. Then, in an unbelieving tone, she asked, "You mean—you aren't going to arrest me?"

It was so silly that Bannister laughed. "I'm not a policeman," he said. "Did you think I was? I don't know any reason why I should take you to the police but I warn you that if you keep on wearing that green outfit you're likely to find yourself at headquarters."

The girl's eyes sought his. "I know," she said. "But I haven't anything else to wear. I'm afraid to—"

She drew off the cap-like bit of fur and ribbon, and automatically raised one hand to smooth her hair. Very attractive hair, with gleaming, golden highlights and darker, richer tones in the shadow. It lay in smooth, soft waves about the girl's face.

For the first time Bannister expected that face closely, and registered approval. She was pretty, but by no means the prettiest girl

CHURCH AND HOME EDUCATION OF CHILDREN NEEDED TO LEAD THEM TO JESUS, SAYS PASTOR

Discussing the aims of Christian education and those responsible for it, the Rev. Albert Eakin Kelly, preaching at the United Presbyterian church Sunday morning, declared that the church and the Christian home are in reality educational institutions, or should be, and their aims should be to educate and lead the minds of children to Christ.

His theme, "Christian Education," was based on the text Deut. 6:7, "An thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." He said in part: "It is well to give clear statement of the aims of Christian education. Some of us count our homes schools of Christian education. What are our aims? Many of us are engaged in one phase or more of the educational work of the church. What are our objectives? Or what should be our objectives and aims if we are working more or less aimlessly?"

"I wonder if Paul did not state the case admirably—That I may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Or again: "Till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Still again, thinking of the Bible as the text book of Christian education: "And is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good work."

"Are we not seeking, through our teaching of the truth of the Book, and through our application of those truths to every day life situations, to instruct as to God, His existence, and character, and relation to men, as to ourselves, our nature, our sins, our needs, as to the way of salvation from sin through the Saviour; to lead to such an exercise of saving faith, to such a decision, and to such a commitment of life to the Lord Jesus, as shall issue in what we name conversion, and the new birth; to make intelligent as to what constitutes Christian living, as to what is Christian duty, as to what Christian service opportunities there are, that there may result a walking daily in the Christian way, a daily performance of Christian duty, and a daily effort in Christian service; and at the same time to train to live such a Christian life and to render such a Christian service?"

"The late Bishop Wilberforce gave as his recipe for effective Christian living, 'Admit Christ full to your heart, submit your will completely to Him, commit your whole life to Him, transmit Him by carrying the message to others.' Such a statement points to the end of Christian education. With the Bible our chief text book, other books throwing light upon its truth, and with the home and the church and daily life experience our school rooms, is not the aim of our whole Christian education program simply this, quite inclusive as it is, the growth of Christian personality?"

"There is room within that aim for the saving grace of God, for the saving faith of the individual, for the entire work of the Holy Spirit in the New Birth, without which no Christian personality can ever be, for all of Christian nurture and development over the years of Christian experience, and leading up that experience's beginnings. But there it is, an aim, clear, distinct, to which Christian fathers and mothers in the Christian home, and to which the educational agencies of the church may well be committed, that at last every one for whom we labor may be presented 'perfect in Christ Jesus.'"

"Do we realize the importance of Christian Education? May I quote Sydney Barry, 'If I were asked where lies of the hope of the world today, I should say, not with the old, not with the men and women of middle life, but in the minds of the children. I should join to that—that the only hope of the world lies in bringing the minds of the children under captivity to the mind of

"Our churches have responsibility here. They are in reality largely educational institutions. So are our Christian homes responsible. They should be far more than they are educational institutions. No one can take the place of a Christian and a Christian mother in a Christian home, in the teaching of our Christian religion. And nothing ought to be allowed to swing the church or the home away from their educational task."

"Four Bottles Helped Me"

Feels Fine...
Never Tired

"My four children were born close together. I lived on a farm with lots of work to do and I got all run down so I could hardly go. Four bottles of your Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully. Twice since then I had to take several bottles to regulate and strengthen me. I take care of my house and children, do all my laundry and do home work for a garment factory, and I feel fine and never get tired. I have also used the Sanative Wash and it relieved my trouble."—Mrs. Chas. S. Pittinger, 55 Conklin Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Christian Science

A lesson sermon on "Reality" was delivered yesterday at the Santa Ana First Church of Christ, Scientist.

One of the Bible selections cited these verses from Matthew: "And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. . . . For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them. But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

Among the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, were the words, "To understand all our Master's sayings as recorded in the New Testament, sayings infinitely important, his followers must grow into that stature of manhood in Christ Jesus which enables them to interpret his spiritual meaning."

At 10:30 o'clock last night Officers Cheatum and Stephenson responded to a call to 1008 East Center street where a man was reported as having been prowling around the house. The intruder had fled before arrival of the police.

Chesterfields taste better

Ripe home-grown tobaccos

We begin with the right kinds of mild ripe Domestic tobaccos. Then we age and mellow them like rare wines for flavor and taste.

Aromatic Turkish tobaccos

Next we add just the right kinds and the right amounts of Turkish tobaccos to give Chesterfield the "seasoning" that helps to make them taste better.

Blended and cross-blended

Finally we "weld" these tobaccos together the Chesterfield way—different from any other—to make Chesterfield a milder better-tasting cigarette.

Muzzle-Loader Gun Shoot Attracts Big Crowd

NEWS REEL MEN TAKE SHOTS OF COMPETITION

MEDICAL MEN TO HEAR HEAD OF ASSOCIATION

Plug hats of early-day gamblers, bustles and pantalettes of Civil War days, and deer-skin jackets of Davy Crockett's time came into their own yesterday, along with flintlocks and percussion caps, at the second annual muzzle-loader match staged at Olive by the Southern California Arms Collectors association.

It was a colorful spectacle which greeted a thousand visitors who saw the shooting during the day. Old-time pistols, long tom rifles, ramrods and powder horns, and pioneer costumes held sway for the day, as old-time gun collectors and marksmen gathered to demonstrate the shooting qualities of the guns which enabled American pioneers to extend the colonial frontiers ever westward in the early days of the republic.

It was an educational event, and great interest was evidenced by the young and old in the display of pioneer firearms and the loading and shooting, limited exclusively to muzzle-loading weapons. One of the interesting displays was that of the original "match lock" gun from the collection of Dr. Roy S. Horton of Santa Ana, president of the association.

Bob Speed was announcer for the day and introduced the contestants. He also explained briefly the old-time weapons for news reel photographers who were present to shoot films which may carry the fame of this Orange county event over a wide area.

In the heavy rifle event, Dr. Horton topped the list of contestants with a score of 46, out of a possible 50, which was the high score for the day.

William Knepp of Los Angeles, with a score of 41, took the flint lock event and also the Kentucky long rifle match. E. B. Workman of Orange, with a score of 43, captured the target rifle event, and Harold Polkinghorn of the Riverside police department took the 100-yard match.

Mrs. Zelma Stagg of Los Angeles took the ladies match with a score of 26, other contestants in this event being Mrs. Niles Ficus and Nellie Sackett of Anaheim and Mrs. Wm. Knepp of Los Angeles.

Polkinghorn captured the percussion revolver match, scoring 42, and Lee McClelland of Olive took the percussion pistol event with a score of 23.

Polkinghorn also led in the dueling contest, with R. M. Stagg of Los Angeles and McClelland trailing.

Holed-Out For Hauptmann's Ransom Hoard

The carpenter's ingenuity was exhibited by Bruno Hauptmann in making this place of concealment for $340 of the Lindbergh ransom money found in his garage in Bronx, N. Y. This closeup picture shows how bills had been hidden in holes drilled into one of the garage timbers. The little 25 caliber automatic was concealed in the slot at left, made by joining three auger holes. Police had searched the garage for nearly a week before finding the cache.

JOE THOMPSON RETIRES AFTER LONG SERVICE

Joseph E. Thompson, veteran mail carrier in the Santa Ana postoffice system, has retired and will be placed on a government pension, it was announced today by Postmaster Terry E. Stephenson.

In all, Thompson has carried mail for the Santa Ana postoffice for the past 33 years. In recent years he has been carrying the mail on rural route 4, which ran through Greenville, the Santa Ana Country club district and back on South Main street.

Postmaster Stephenson said the rural route will be combined with other routes and will not exist as a separate route after this. This is being done in the interests of economy, he said. There now are four rural routes, including the one which has been merged.

There are five other employees of the Santa Ana postoffice who have seen more than 30 years of service. These are Superintendent of Mails L. F. Harvey, C. C. Langley, foreman; Charles Hurd, postal savings clerk and two carriers, Earl G. Glenn and Charles Winans.

Postal employees must retire after 30 years of service.

SOUTHLAND RAISES BANANAS; LARGE TREE AT LOCAL HOME

The banana raising industry is not expected ever to become commercially established in Southern California, but just the same, the southland climate is conducive to raising often matures.

A bunch of bananas was brought to the Register office by A. M. Blanding, local nurseryman, which had been grown by L. B. Merrick at his wholesale nursery in Whittier where a number of banana trees are growing in his tropical garden, and producing some 15 to 20 bunches of bananas each year, averaging some 45 fruit to the bunch.

The home-grown bananas average five inches in length, are somewhat stubby, and of fair flavor. A large blossom at top of the bunch is cut off and the stem wired to promote the growth of the fruit, it is said.

Many Santa Ana people have seen the large ornamental banana tree in the garden of J. Fred Parsons at 106 East Chestnut, which measures approximately eight feet in diameter. As each trunk produces its bunch of bananas, it dies, and new shoots appear which in the course of years produce a crop.

The Parsons banana tree which has been growing there for 40 years, now contains three or four bunches of fruit, and last year matured one large bunch containing 75 bananas.

SUGAR BENEFIT CONTRACTS DUE WITHIN MONTH

Orange county sugar beet growers today were interested in an announcement by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration that sugar beet processors from California have agreed, in conference with officials of the Sugar Section, to withhold offering of 1935 beet purchase contracts to growers until growers' acreage allotments are developed by the Sugar Section from the growers' past records of performance.

When lined up, the matter will be taken care of through the agricultural extension service, farm advisor's office, in Santa Ana for Orange county, which acts as agent for the AAA.

Those acreage allotments are to be ascertained and included in the benefit contracts between the secretary of agriculture and growers under which cooperating growers will receive benefit payments. It is expected that benefit contracts will be offered by the secretary to beet growers within the next two months and, because of the earlier planting season, to California beet growers during the last two weeks in October.

California processors who have been in conference with John E. Dalton, chief of the Sugar Section, to discuss the sugar beet program as it applies to processors in California included Wiley Blair Jr. and G. J. Daley of the Holly Sugar company and G. J. Strodtbeck of the Los Alamitos Sugar company.

In order to enable growers to have the maximum acreage permitted under the marketing allotments to processors and, in order to enable the processors to obtain sufficient acreage to produce their full marketing allotments, it was agreed that it would be necessary for cooperating growers in California to decide by November 1 their plans as to the growing of beets in 1935.

In case growers' acreage allotments established by the Secretary for California are not contracted for by November 1, these unused allotments are to be reallocated, subject to the Secretary's approval, to old cooperating growers desiring to increase their allotments, or to new growers.

The acreage to be planted in each factory district is to be an amount sufficient to produce, on the average, the sugar which such factory district will produce within its marketing allotment for 1935.

According to a report to local police someone entered the office of the ice company last night and looted the safe of $31.99. An early investigation indicated that the robber entered the office with a pass key and opened the safe. It was apparent, the investigation revealed, that the thief knew the combination of the safe.

Following the police investigation Deputy Sheriff Lutes of the county identification bureau searched the safe and office for fingerprints.

Cooking Classes At Gas Co. Office Start On Tuesday

Weekly fall cooking classes conducted by Mrs. Margaret Lackland, home service director of the Southern Counties Gas company, will open with the first class to be conducted at the gas company office here at 2 p. m. Tuesday, it was announced today. The classes will be held each Tuesday thereafter and are free to women of Santa Ana and vicinity.

The menu to be demonstrated Tuesday consists of various quick dishes which will appeal to housewives in economy of time and money. It includes baked tomato surprise, lightning chocolate cake, round steak de luxe, junket ice cream, concord grape pie and apple sauce cookies.

For those who cannot attend the regular schools, the programs are available at all of the offices of the Southern Counties Gas company after the cooking schools are held, and will be found on the counter in the offices.

NEW STAR MAIL ROUTE STARTS SERVICE TODAY

A new star route mail service between Santa Ana and Fullerton by which eastern mail will be brought to most of the offices in time for early morning delivery was established today.

Delivery of eastern mail will be advanced in some instances 24 hours and in other instances only four or five hours, while on Saturdays delivery will be made of mail that heretofore has been delayed until Mondays, Postmaster Stephenson said.

A mail truck will leave Santa Ana each day except Sundays and holidays at 5 a. m. to take mail from Santa Ana and Anaheim to catch the 5:50 a. m. train at Fullerton. The truck then will bring back to Anaheim, Orange and Santa Ana whatever mail from the east there is on the train for those offices as for offices that receive mail through Anaheim, Orange and Santa Ana.

Previously the train reaching Fullerton at 5:50 a. m. carried the eastern mail into Los Angeles and it has come back to Anaheim, Orange and Santa Ana, reaching Santa Ana at 10:30 a. m., too late for first delivery, too late to go out on rural routes and too late for early morning dispatches to other postoffices served through Santa Ana, Anaheim and Orange; and on Saturdays, too late for delivery until Monday.

The early morning dispatch will prove of great value to late mailings to Los Angeles. With a closing hour of 5 a. m. here, the mail will reach Los Angeles at 7 a. m. under the new arrangement.

SHOW PICTURES OF MT. EVEREST

CLAREMONT, Oct. 1.—Announcement is made that Air Commodore Fellowes, leader of the Houston-Mount Everest expedition, will be presented in Bridges auditorium, Claremont College, on the evening of November 5. The conquest of Mount Everest by air will be vividly presented in motion pictures and from personal experiences through this noted aviator.

Flying at an altitude of over six and one-half miles, confronting a gale of 110 miles an hour and a temperature of 76 degrees below zero, a group of British airmen achieved the topping of Everest by the narrow margin of 100 feet, attaining a view never before enjoyed by man.

The climbing of this great peak, nature's last stronghold, has been attempted many times, but never yet accomplished, although at least one expedition reached within 400 feet of the top before perishing.

Detailed pictures of the planes and equipment and of the conquest of the peak itself are to be shown.

Sisters' Arrival for Visit Followed by Birthday Dinner

Mrs. G. N. Grigsby's birthday anniversary on Thursday of the past week, brought her one of the happiest of surprises, the unexpected arrival of her sisters, Miss Elsie Snively and Mrs. E. E. Higdon of Eureka, Ill., here for an extended visit in the Grigsby home, 113 Spruce street. Mrs. Grigsby was injured in an automobile accident early in the spring, and has been in a serious condition ever since. Her sisters planned the surprise visit with the hope that it would benefit her health, and Miss Snively came prepared to remain throughout the winter.

Mr. Higdon, whose husband, the Rev. E. E. Higdon, is both a minister of the Christian church and a member of the faculty of Eureka Christian college in the Illinois city, will return to Eureka after a visit here of some six weeks.

Other Santa Ana members of the family circle, aware of the proposed visit, had planned a birthday dinner complimenting Mrs. Grigsby and the guests, and this was shared Thursday evening in the home of the honoree. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Grigsby, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Quick, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Anderson, Mrs. Jessie White, Miss Grace Grigsby, Miss Snively and Mrs. Higdon.

There were cards, letters and gifts galore for Mrs. Grigsby, including a wealth of flowers sent by interested friends. Especially beautiful among these were the bouquets sent by her pastor, Dr. George A. Warner, and Mrs. Warner, and a big cluster of white and yellow display chrysanthemums sent by her son, B. J. Grigsby and his wife and family of Park Ridge, Ill.

Birthday Party Plans
Comes as Surprise

When Miss Bevelyn Harman called Thursday evening at the home of Miss Ruth Rule, 1615 West Fourth street, planning to attend a picture show, she found instead that she was honor guest at a party celebrating her own sixteenth birthday anniversary.

It was a merry evening planned by the young people, and featured a coodle contest, Chinese fortune telling and music. In the games, Miss Naomi Sands and Lorin Brown scored high and received the prizes. There were many talented guests present to add to the musical program, including Miss Lois Sargent and Messrs. Clyde Hansen, Clyde Holland and Ben Sargent.

Introduction of one contest provided a clever way of presenting birthday gifts to Miss Harman. She was instructed to race with a suitcase to a certain point and don the garments which it held, but found instead that it was packed with ribbon-tied packages. The many dahlias, roses and other flowers decking the home added attractive setting for the refreshment hour, when fruit jelly and hot chocolate were served with birthday cakes. One of these was a beautifully decorated one baked especially for Miss Harman by Mrs. E. L. Young of Garden Grove, and another had its array of 16 candles, which were blown out to the accompaniment of good wishes for the honoree.

In the party were Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Harman, parents of the birthday celebrant, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Broderick, parents of the hostess; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Sargent; the Misses Ruth Rule and Bevelyn Harman, hostess and honor guest; Sarah Broderick, Naomi Sands, Katie Simonsen, Edith Armstrong, Mildred Hill, Wilma Hart, Beatrice Gregor, Gladys Hill; Messrs. Bringing to a conclusion a succession of colorful parties feting Miss Jean Peacock in advance of her early October wedding to Howard J. Hales of Woodland, formerly of this city, was a bridge party and shower given at the end of the past week by Mrs. G. H. Chesley in her home, 225A Granada street, Belmont Shore.

Mrs. Chesley's luxurious suite was decorated with pale yellow flowers. These fragrant flowers centered the small tables for the serving of chicken salad with hot biscuits, coffee and cake at the close of bridge play. Prizes in the card contest were won by Miss Jane Pinero, Mrs. Donald Harwood and Mrs. Nelson Hall with first, second and low scores.

Miscellaneous gifts in wide variety were showered on Miss Peacock by the friends on Mrs. Chesley's guest list, some of whom were from Long Beach although the majority were from this city.

They included in addition to the guest of honor and her grandmother and aunt, Mrs. Thomas Mann and Mrs. L. Carleton Fairbanks, Messdames W. B. Pyles, Worth Babbitt, Nelson Hall, Clarence Ranney, Donald Harwood, Lillian Pinero, S. J. Hales, Herbert Hill, Charles Woodfill, Kenneth Chesley, A. There was a covered dish luncheon at noon, completed by the serving of ice cream and a birthday cake, baked and decorated especially for Mrs. Humphrey.

By this time, men were everywhere. They almost seemed to fill the air. Some did some fancy back dives while the others dove in straight.

Then clever somersaults were done. The whole thing was a lot of fun. Wee Goldy clapped his hands and loudly shouted, "Gee that's great."

Broadcasts To Tell Of KREG Features

Beginning today, announcements giving details of special broadcasts for the day and evening from KREG will be made daily at 9 a. m., 12:20 and 6:35 p. m. for the information of listeners.

This feature will be an extension of the present practice of giving a resume of the day's schedule at 9 a. m. and at 11 p. m. daily which has been in effect for over two years.

JANE CARROLL TO BROADCAST TRUE STORIES

The first of a series of inspiring broadcasts entitled "True Stories" will be made by Jane Carroll, author of "The Road to Happiness" and a popular speaker with many clubs and other organizations in the middle west and tomorrow morning at 9:15 from KREG. It was announced by station officials.

Miss Carroll is an authority on beauty, charm and personality and her discussions will be illuminated with authentic accounts of accomplishments along these lines. In addition to "success stories" of a different nature, it was stated. "Hundreds of women have enjoyed these stories and have been directed to a fuller, happier and more successful life through this course," Miss Carroll said. Whether the story concerns a woman who was ill, homely and a failure and then became healthy, radiant and beautiful; or of an achievement in some other line of endeavor—it might be a love story, for no woman's life is complete without love—she will like it. I am making these stories available by radio to those who cannot attend meetings or lectures because I have been urged to do so by those who liked them.

"True Stories" will be broadcast from Monday to Friday, inclusive, each week, at the same hour.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S TALK

We would, as an editorial today, call your attention to the address of President Roosevelt last evening.

Coming as it does, after weeks of criticism of his policy by financial leaders, and a series of questions propounded by the United States Chamber of Commerce, it was very timely. But more than this, it was clear, comprehensive, frank and illuminating.

Some things he said are well worth special repetition. Replying to those who would question the necessity for government activity in industry, he presented the arguments, even the language of one of the keenest thinkers of our time, an ultra-conservative, the counsel and attorney for some of the biggest interests in this country, Elihu Root.

Answers Criticism

Note a few words from Mr. Root, quoted by the president, and see how completely they answered about half of the carping criticism that was levelled at him:

The relations between the employer and the employee, between the owners of aggregated capital and the units of organized labor, between the small producer, the small trader, the consumer, and the great transporting and manufacturing and distributing agencies, all present new questions for the solution of which the old reliance upon the free action of individual wills appears quite inadequate. And in many directions, the intervention of that organized control which we call government seems necessary to produce the same result of justice and right conduct which obtained through the attrition of individuals before the new conditions arose.

Then, again, notice the recitation of the valuable achievements which none can gainsay. To put this in the language of the president:

We have, through various Federal agencies, saved debtors and creditors alike in many other fields of enterprise, such as loans on farm mortgages and home mortgages; loans to the railroads and insurance companies and, finally, help for home owners and industry itself. . . .

The country now enjoys the safety of bank savings under the new banking laws, the careful checking of new securities under the Securities Act, and the curtailment of bank stock speculation through the Securities Exchange Act.

He then discusses the NRA achievements and emphasizes the increase in payrolls and the rise from the deficit figure in the first quarter of 1933.

President Allays Fear

Mr. Roosevelt certainly has allayed all genuine fear on the part of the public that he is going outside of our present economic system to achieve results. For he says frankly:

We count, in the future as in the past, on the driving power of individual initiative and the incentive of fair private profit, strengthened with the acceptance of those obligations to the public interest which rest upon us all. We have the right to expect that this driving power will be given patriotically and wholeheartedly to our nation.

He admits there has been a retarding of the progress by strikes and then urges a program where employer and employee shall look to the regular governmental agencies which have been raised for the settlement of disputes.

This probably is the weakest part in his address, because up till now, unfortunately, it has been found that the government has not furnished any dependable method of settling disputes between the employer and employee, which either labor or capital has been satisfied was within the provisions of Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery act.

When a program is set up that each side can depend upon, we predict that will be used, certainly, by the employee.

Answers "No Necessity" Plea

He addresses a few words to those who now are claiming that there has been no need of what has been done. He speaks in good humor, but very pointedly. He says:

Those, fortunately few in number, who are frightened by boldness and cowed by the necessity for making decisions, complain that all we have done is unnecessary and subject to great risks. Now that these people are coming out of their storm cellars, they forget that there ever was a storm. They point to England. They would have you believe that England has made progress out of her depression by a do-nothing policy, by letting nature take her course.

Did England let nature take her course? No.

Did England hold to the gold standard when her reserves were threatened? No.

Has England gone back to the gold standard today? No.

What British Did

Did England hesitate to call in $10,000,000,000 of her war bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, to issue new bonds thereby bearing only 3 1/2 per cent interest, thereby saving the British Treasury $150,000,000 a year in interest alone? No. And let it be recorded that the British bankers helped.

Is it not a fact that relations between capital and labor on the basis of collective bargaining are much further advanced in Great Britain than in the United States?

It is perhaps not strange that the conservative British press has told us with pardonable irony that much of our New Deal program is only an attempt to catch up with British reforms that go back ten years or more.

Answers Unconstitutionality Claim

His statement concerning the constitution and how it is used by some in their attempt to bar progress, is very timely, as he said, quoting the following statement from Chief Justice White, in the days of Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, when their acts were attacked as unconstitutional:

There is great danger, it seems to me, to arise from the constant habit which prevails where anything is opposed or objected to, of referring without rhyme or reason to the Constitution as a means of preventing its accomplishment, thus creating the general impression that the Constitution is but a barrier to progress instead of being the broad highway through which alone true progress may be enjoyed.

In the light of this, we can understand his statement of broad caliber on liberty with which he closes his address.

LESS MONEY GOING ABROAD

Tourists from this country to Europe the past year spent $292,000,000 abroad. This is 65 per cent less than in 1929, and 32 per cent less than in 1932. Canada received 45 per cent less from American tourists last year than the year before.

In contributions by Americans to charitable institutions abroad, the decrease in contributions by Protestant bodies was 32 per cent; by Roman Catholics it was 17 per cent less. The contributions by Jews for charitable work abroad were 25 per cent more. This can be accounted for by the sympathy of the American Jews for their racial brethren resulting from the persecution of Jews in Germany and elsewhere.

Over against what was sent out of the country in these ways, citizens of this country received a total of $267,000,000 as interest and dividends on loans from abroad. This means a balance in our favor in the matter of imports over exports in what is called "invisible" international trade.

The outside world is not sharing our wealth as it did before the World War. Before 1914 we were a debtor nation.

We shipped more goods and sent more money directly and indirectly abroad than were shipped in return. We had to, because our debts abroad required it.

After the war we found ourselves a creditor nation. Europe owed us, and under normal conditions they had to ship us more goods or send us more money to pay their debts. But these payments were balanced by money spent by American tourists abroad or by the services of one kind and another by foreigners for Americans. The depression threw this all out of balance, and all are suffering on account of it.

Bathing The Monument

—Christian Science Monitor—

"The world's tallest obelisk"—proper descriptive term—is known better as the Washington Monument. It towers over the city of Washington and, right now, appears to be clothed in a suit of wooden palmans.

Workmen are cleaning the monument, for the first time in its history, while others who are stone masons are "ironing out" the age-worn wrinkles. A writer for the National Geographic Society contributes information not generally realized. The monument was a long time in the making. It was first discussed in Congress shortly after the death of Washington in 1799, yet its capstone was not set in place until December 6, 1884. John Marshall, of Virginia, in 1799 introduced a resolution in the House providing for a marble monument to be erected in Washington and that "the family of George Washington be requested to permit his body to be deposited under it." Martha Washington acceded to the provisions, but nothing was done.

Discussion was continued until 1883 when influential citizens of Washington organized to promote the project. Another John Marshall, this one the famous Chief Justice, was named president of the group which financed construction of the shaft until it rose 154 feet. Progress was slow. In 1848 the Cornerstone was laid and in 1876 President Grant signed a bill providing the Government take over and complete the erection of the monument. Stone by stone it rose until 1884 when the capstone was placed. States, cities, fraternities, fire companies, lodges and other organizations presented stones to be used, and it is said there are about 23,000 of them in the structure. And now the tall shaft, the outlines of which are familiar to every American, comes into the news because it is being given the first bath in its history.

A Universal Language

—Oakland Tribune—

Almost simultaneously with the news that several English cathedrals, including Portsmouth and Blackburn, are to be enlarged their accommodations in order to deal with increasing congregations, comes the news that half a dozen others are on the verge of bankruptcy. These latter include cathedrals as famous as the thirteenth century Salisbury in the south, fourteenth century Lichfield, in whose cloisters Dr. Johnson and David Garrick walked as boys together; Ripon and Carlisle in the north, and Wells in the west.

It is possible that their financial difficulties, which arise in part from recent economic changes in their constitution that are not yet fully worked out, may be only temporary, but they are none the less acute. It would be a thousand pities if stringent circumstances compelled the authorities to allow to fall into neglect the noble structures which have been the delight and inspiration of many centuries and the visiting peoples of many nations.

Architecture, unlike even music, is a universal language. The Taj Mahal carries its message of love and remembrance as clearly to the populations of the West as to those of India. So is it with these churches. None can miss the significance of the power and strength of righteousness that speaks in the firmly proportioned massiveness of the stones at Wells. Grace and joy are lyrical in the delicacy of Lichfield. It is earnestly to be hoped that England (and not England alone) will see to it that these magnificent and eloquent buildings encounter no danger of neglect.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

A WORD TO A WEEVIL

On learning that it is proposed to fight him with germs.

Little weevil in the wheat,
Little borer in the corn,
Soon you'll lose your self-conceit,
Soon of power you'll be shorn.
Greedy and malicious mites,
In the field and on the farm,
Wicked vengeful parasites
Will destroy your pow'r for harm.

Creatures far too small to view
Will pursue you here and there,
All the blossoming orchard through,
While you strive to strip it bare;
Of wee microscopic foes
You'll become the living prey
When at night you seek repose,
Or attack the crops by day.

While the centuries have sped
Your own pleasure you've pursued,
Making mankind's daily bread
Your exclusive daily food.
You have dined from sun to sun
While the summer season's passed,
But your days of sport are done—
Science has you licked at last.

Microbes that you cannot see
Will be planted in your skin;
Soon mere ghosts of bugs will be
You and all your vicious kin.
Glut your greed while yet you may,
Leap, kick up your heels, and bound,
There will shortly dawn a day
When you will not be around.

PARAGRAPHS

As we understand the prophet of disaster, the country will go to the dogs unless all of us grind his axe.

Capitalists don't strike. When they want their income adjusted upward, they just soak the public.

A general strike won't help. What the world needs is a strike of generals.

Economy: Buying a dozen bananas because they're cheaper than say, letting six rot.

YOU'RE BEGINNING TO SLIP WHEN A BIG CELEBRATION MEANS "JUST ANOTHER BLANKETY-BLANK TRAFFIC JAM".

In pronouncing a foreign word, like Nazi or Fascism, you just disregard the spelling and say it the most unreasonable way and that's it.

"There is something good in anybody who likes dogs." Assuming, of course, that he has eaten some.

"Cheap as dirt" is no longer a good synonym. Look what the radio people pay for using popular songs.

AMERICANISM: DITCHING A BALL PLAYER THE MOMENT HE FAILS TO MAKE GOOD; KEEPING A PUBLIC SERVANT WHO MAKES A MESS OF THINGS.

As a last resort the government might fix up a code for bandits and ruin all but a few big ones.

Rugged individualism sounds good, but it isn't the kind of sound that interests an empty stomach.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLEN FRANK

DISCUSSION VS. ARGUMENT

I lunched today in the office of one of the authentically great business leaders of America. He is a Democrat. But that does not matter now when party labels have largely ceased to signify any distinctive approach to the whole round of national issues. When I accused him of being a Democrat by ancestry and inertia, he smilingly conceded the point, and insisted that my Republicanism was of the same variety.

He is quite as restless as many other business men over some phases of the New Deal, but his approach to these and other issues is distinctive enough to merit analysis and commendation.

"I sat yesterday for several hours with a group of my Wall Street colleagues talking about certain of the Roosevelt policies," he told me. "We were getting exactly nowhere. The group was divided between men who denounced everything Roosevelt was doing and men who agreed with everything Roosevelt was doing. The absurdity of both positions was apparent. Roosevelt is not all wrong, and he is not all right. But 90 per cent of the talk that goes on would suggest that he is one or the other. I finally told my colleagues that the trouble with them was that they did not know the difference between discussion and argument. When you discuss a problem or a situation, your only concern is to find the facts and discover the truth. When you argue, you are bent upon proving that you are right and the other fellow is wrong. You cannot make headway in running either a business or a country that way."

That was simple but fundamental horse sense! It is to be hoped that the 1936 campaign will, as it finally takes shape, become an intelligent discussion rather than a warfare of argument.

If the Republicans are smart they will not stick to the old technique of damning everything Democratic. They will agree with the Democrats on every point where agreement is possible, saving their fire for the things that really cry aloud for intelligent and vigorous opposition. The best politics will be to forget politics. Copyright, 1934, McClure News'p's Syn.

DULL MONDAY

"I dread Monday. I have about ten children in my class who aren't able to do a stroke of work until about Wednesday. They work better Thursday and are going strong about Friday. Then off they go for the week end, lose a lot of what they gained those two days and I get nothing out of them again until next Wednesday. How in the world I'm ever going to get them anywhere is beyond me."

"But why? What's the matter?" "The week end trips. The children go with their fathers and mothers for a week end trip in the car. They travel like sixty all over the known world, stop at camps, hot dog stands, hotels and tourists houses. They go to the movies and the side shows. Anything that is exciting makes the trip a success."

"They don't get proper rest and sleep. They eat the wrong sort of food. They're off schedule for those few days and by the time they get back for school on Monday they're about fit for two days in bed. I've spoken to their people about it but there seems to be nothing they can do. They have to go out at the week end and they have to give the children a good time. So there you are. Or rather, there I am with the youngsters falling asleep in class, yawning in my face, listless, dull, paying no attention to anything that is going on."

"What are you going to do? They can't get on that way." "Of course they can't. They're going to stay back every last one of them. That means twenty odd per cent of my class is going to fail. There isn't a thing I can do about it. I've told their people; I've reported them to the Head of the school; I've given them extra attention which they cannot profit by; it's just too bad."

There is a good deal of this going on in the schools nowadays. The long week end means a holiday for the family and of course the children break routine in every direction. Perhaps if they got a chance to rest one day, say all of Sunday, they might get to school in better shape.

There is always some loss after the week end holiday. Monday always has to be a sort of make-up day—a gathering together for the new push. The teacher expects that and provides for it.
